Unit Dimensions and Square Footage: These are approximate measurements of space and are for informational purposes only. The actual dimensions of the finished unit will be determined by the Developer of Condoideas, and generally will include the area within the finished walls, including walls, outside portions of the exterior walls, and the area within the finished walls. The actual square footage of the unit, as determined by the Architectural Method, will be greater than the actual square footage shown on the diagram. The Architectural Method is generally used in real estate advertising to provide a general sense of space. It is not intended to provide a precise measurement of the actual square footage of the unit. The actual square footage of the unit will be determined by the Architectural Method.
